Grammar Worksheet Zero Conditional Match 15 clauses to form zero conditional sentences; with RESPONSE KEY and chart

Level conversion percentage: Elemental to Pre-Intermediate

Time: Approx. 15 minutes

FREE Download ACTIVITY TIP Before giving this worksheet to your students, model the exercise: write the first two clauses on the left side of the board (1. 'If I'm late for class...' and 2. 'When you stay up very late....') with your matching clauses on the right side of the board: '... is very tired the next morning.' and '... my teacher gets angry. Ask your students to match the sentences, and when they respond correctly, draw lines between the matching clauses. In short by having students compare the answers with classmates, and then choose one or two students to write their answers on the board: 1 - C/2 - F/etc. Correct and discuss any errors. (Add 5 to 10 minutes.)

Give each student a copy of the worksheet. Students choose a color for their Martians and write the color at the top of the second column. Working alone, students complete the column with information about their Martians ending conditional zero for example, 'If they're hungry, they eat each other.' When students are finished, divide them into groups of two. Students ask their partner for the color of their Martians and write the color at the top of the last column. Students then take turns asking zero conditional questions about their partner's Martians, for example, 'What do orange Martians do if they're hungry?' Students write their partner's answers in the last column by completing zero conditional sentences as before. Students then change partners and tell their new partner about the similarities and differences between the two types of Martians in their worksheet. Students also find out if their new partner has similar answers. Afterwards, students write about the most interesting differences between the types of Martians. Finally, there is a class feedback session to discuss student responses and review zero conditionality.
